

The World Impact

When Jesus said go forth to the world and preach the good news making disciples of all nations his disciples did not hesitate in engaging themselves in what we may consider an impossible task.

They did not have lots of resources to accomplish the task and yet they had a lot of motivation, obedience and love for the lost. So, although it was an impossible task for them, they didn't think like that at all and thrown themselves to the job fully hearted.

They paid with their lives, the cost of their commitment for the mission.

But gradually along the history of Christianity, proclamation becomes less and less important.

Half a century ago, the emphasis of the Church was way out of proclamation.

Until a new generation of believers with a new vision and a new language landed on the planet: Sports people using the Universal Language of Sports
